

‘Play (The Greek Theatre)’ by Albie L. – 3rds

The history of theatre is interesting,
It started with Greeks while the Romans were resting.
The theatres were most famous in Athens,
Men – not women – would show their passions.

Homer and Euripides weaved many a story,
Like Hector and Achilles, now that was gory.
Or Odysseus’s journey over the seas,
And Zeus’s son, the mighty Hercules.

No games would be played,
Just talking words would be laid.
The grim and the sad are tragedies,
While funny ones were comedies.

As you watched you could smell the air,
The actors would see you – and everyone – glare.
Right at them straight in the eyes,
While the words and phrases would entice.
